Inner East Faith Leaders Unite for Safety and Respect

Inner East Faith Communities Unite for Safety and Respect Project lead by Monash City Council in collaboration with Whitehorse and Manningham Councils commenced earlier this year to build the capacity of faith communities to prevent violence against women. The project involves working directly with representatives of the Inner Eastern Interfaith Networks (IEIN) utilising a co-design approach.

Delivered through workshops and facilitated discussions, the project strengthens existing partnerships and provides a platform to collaborate, share skills and resources and develop new partnerships enabling a strong and unified approach. Faith environments are an important domain for GE action, with a powerful influence on social norms and beliefs. Faith leaders can play a key role in building respectful relationships.
